PARALLELS BETWEEN THE HYDRONYMY IN PELAGONIA AND PODGUR

In this paper we have presented some hydronymy parallels between the region of Pelagonia in Macedonia and Podgur in Kosovo.

We have focused on this topic based on the fact that these Albanian lands are rich in terms of onomastics in general and in the hydronymy in particular, because being found in an area isolated from other Albanian speakers, they have managed to preserve many dialectical words and microtoponyms that are very rarely or scarcely found in other Albanian dialects.

The microtoponyms, and in particular the hydronymy identified in this area has also been analyzed from the dialectical point of view, showing the main features with concrete examples, therefore, the hydronymy of these areas is of great importance and interest in general for the Albanian language and in particular for the discipline of dialectology, because this land strip is a significant part of the Albanian ethnic lands in terms of its geography, ethnicity, history and dialect.
