

YOUTH AND SOCIAL PROBLEMS OF TIME

The violence among teenagers and it against them are present. This is the conclusion of studies made by our authors and foreign ones. We are not concerned much with the cases nor their profile, as we will not do differences between manifestations of the conflict and violence among individuals and groups by the layering them that can be a classification of them by age, sex, educational attainment, religious, cultural and subcultural formation of families they come from etc.. What is important to note is that the phenomenon is present. With the increasing trend, mainly in secondary schools, mostly in the city and more prevalent in urban areas. The cases of violence in the countryside are not excluded.

Teenagers are violated in different forms by their parents. They are of all ages, but pre teens are less protected. (11 - 14-year-olds)

“One day you will regret for the way you treat us, but it will be late.”

This is the answer to give teens after violation suffered by their parents. In various forms other children also express rebellion against parental extreme authoritarianism, social relations, cold relationship with them, misuse of positive values that inherent this age etc..

Therefore working with children needs a special care. The greatest asset that we can leave them as an inheritance, is to deal with them every day, in the best sense of the word, communicating constantly with them and creating space for cooperation and freedom of action within the norms of society and family in terms of another system.
